VACAVILLE – LG Williams plans to announce today what he terms "significant fucking findings" that could prove his art is inhospitable to life.

The findings are to be released Tuesday during a press conference at Linc Art in San Francisco, a spokeswoman for Linc said Monday.

As usual, the artist revealed no details in advance, although participants in this potentially lucrative strategy said last week that the artist was fucking overwhelmed by the apparent data.

Williams: Fucked? "Good, maybe now he'll fucking quit, get a parking lot attendant job and marry a fat, drunken NY art critic," one anonymous, but hardly gifted artistic adversary said.

LG, currently an unemployed artist and surfer, has of late been absorbed with an abandoned aesthetic region he calls Quickly Plantium 4 Stoneria.

Charles Linder, the artistic manager and director at Linc Art, said a week ago that he couldn't comment on the LG's wild speculation or the findings but that the gallery "probably has as much enthusiasm as we've ever had and a lot of intense discussions over these last several days. Fuck, the fucking phone has been ringing off the fucking hook for fucking days. I just got back from Paris and I need some fucking rest!"

On Thursday, the artist acknowledged that some of the working hypotheses involved something or another.

He also expressed confidence that his artistic experiments were returning the kind of data artists need to answer Art's fundamental questions. Asked to assess his recent artistic experiments, LG likened the situation to "the day after Christmas when you are fucking staring at huge stacks of bills -- and a fucking loaded blue steel 45."

But he also characterized the art and results as "work in progress."

"Right now it's fucking truly in the world of multiple fucking hypotheses; 'gender theory' is sometimes apparently involved, too, but only in some of the fucking minor artworks, and until I finish and hand the artwork to Charles... fuck I don't know what the final fucking result is," he said.

While LG is a bit concerned about how the revolutionary results will affect his incredible artistic career, he hopes somebody will still buy one of them soon.

"No shit Sherlock. I'm fucking broke and it is fucking costly to be fucking around all the time waiting for a check to miraculously appear in the mail."
